ERP Extensions using Oracle APEX

Do you have critical data and applications outside your EBS system?

Many Oracle ERP installations (EBS & Fusion) cover multiple departments and many business-critical processes. Such installations can't always adapt to your needs. This is why companies resort to creating decentralized data points or databases (such as in Microsoft Excel or Access) to solve tactical issues. These applications often contain critical data. This raises issues such as:

- Data integrity. As a secondary "source of truth", these outside data files can compromise your data. Sharing multiple copies can make things worse.
- Security. Excel or other types of data files don't fall under robust authentication schemes and may not even be passworded. They can escape security, through printout or email, for example.
- Confidentiality issues. Such files make it difficult to control who has access to what information.
- Grey areas in your business processes. Because they exist outside your ERP, these files are rarely formally mapped.
